

Airplane photograph of the new million dollar bridge connecting Virginia and Washington, D. C., which is approaching completion. The old bridge is shown above the new structure. To the right is Georgetown University.
International, from U. S. Air Service.

All hands to windward, aboard King George's yacht Britannia, which took part in the handicap race at the Cowes regatta.
(c) Central News Service.

Admiral Niblack, commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, photographed at Cowes, where he viewed the regatta from the bridge of the U. S. S. Utah.
International.

King George and Princess Mary were aboard Britannia during the handicap race in which she took part at Cowes. The Duke of Connaught is seated on the hatch; Admiral Campbell stands behind him and the Marquise d'Hautpol is beside the King.
(c) Central News Service.

Above — Col. Charles R. Forbes, commander in chief of the Government forces for the relief of disabled soldiers, now consolidated as the Veterans' Bureau.
Copyright, Harris & Ewing.

Group of American students, representing practically all the States of the Union, photographed in front of the statue of Marcus Aurelius on their recent sightseeing visit to Rome.
(c) Keystone View Co.

Above — Britannia leading Nyria and Terpsichore in the order named, in the handicap race at the Cowes regatta.
(c) Central News Service.

At left — A companion to Laddie Boy, the President's Airedale, has arrived at the White House. He is Oh Boy, a bulldog of distinguished lineage. His tail looks somewhat long, but the official policy of retrenchment will attend to that.
Underwood & Underwood.